

SETH from THE MEN'S ROOM by Joshua James

SETH

Are men and women equal? Let me tell you somethin'. I love women. I have always loved women. I love all their shapes and sizes, the mean ones, the shy ones, the tall ones and the short ones, I have loved them all. There is somethin', somethin' just magical about 'em, about bein' female, that sets 'em apart from everything else. I don't just love 'em, I WORSHIP women. It's how I know there's a God, 'cause he put women down here on earth with us. He put them down here to keep us guys in line.

Sure, I've been hurt by women before. Oh yeah, I've had my heart stomped and my ass kicked. Oh yeah, oh yeah. I could tell you stories. But in the end, it doesn't matter. 'Cause no matter what they do to me, no matter how much pain and aggravation they have given me by the simple nature of their being female, I will always forgive them, and always come back for more. 'Cause I love 'em, pure and simple. There'll be something in a look, or a smile, or maybe just the simple way they bring their hand up and touch their cheek, that makes it all worthwhile. I love 'em, and they know it.

So if you ask me if men and women are equal, my answer would be NO. They are not equal.

Women are much better than men.
